They taught us, indeed, to cloath, to dwell in houses,
To feast, to sleep on down, to be profuse:
A fine exchange for liberty. Phillips's Briton.

FINE. n. f. [fin, Cimbric.]

1. A mulct; a pecuniary punishment.
The killing of an Irishman was not punished by our law, as manslaughter, which is felony and capital; but by a fine or pecuniary punishment, called an ericke. Davies on Ireland.
2. Penalty.

Ev'n this ill night your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated treachery. Shakespeare's King John.

3. Forfeit; money paid for any exemption or liberty.
The spirit of wantonness is sure scared out of him: if the devil have him not in fee-simple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waste, attempt us again. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

Beside finer set upon plays, games, balls and feasting, they have many customs which contribute to their simplicity. Addis.

How vain that second life in others breath,
Th' estate which wits inherit after death!
Ease, health, and life for this they must resign,
Unfore the tenure, but how vast the fine! Pope.

4. [From finis, Latin; fin, finis, French.] The end; conclusion. It is seldom used but adverbially, in fine.

In fine, whatsoever he was, he was nothing but what it pleased Zelmane, the powers of his spirit depending of her. Sid.

His resolution, in fine, is, that in the church a number of things are strictly observed, whereof no law of scripture maketh mention one way or other. Hooker, b. ii. f. 5.

Still the fine's the crown;
Whate'er the course, the end is the renown. Shakespeare.

Your daughter, ere she seems as won,
Desires this ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Herself most chaffly absent. Shak. All's well that ends well.

The blessings of fortune are the lowliest: the next are the bodily advantages of strength and health; but the superlative blessings, in fine, are those of the mind. L'Estrange.

In fine, he wears no limbs about him sound,
With fores and sicknesses beleagu'd round. Dryden's Juv.

In fine, let there be a perfect relation betwixt the parts and the whole, that they may be entirely of a piece. Dryden.

FIN

For him the loves:
She nam'd not me; that may be Torridmond,
Whom he has thrice in private seen this day:
Then I am finely caught in my own snare. Dryd. Sp. Fryar.

FINENESS. n. f. [from fine.]

1. Elegance; beauty; delicacy.
Every thing was full of a choice fineness, that, if it wanted any thing in majesty, it supplied with increase in pleasure; and if at the first it struck not admiration, it ravished with delight. Sidney.

The softness of her sex, and the fineness of her genius, conspire to give her a very distinguishing character. Prior.

2. Show; splendour; gaiety of appearance.
The fineness of cloaths destroys the ease: it often helps men to pain, but can never rid them of any: the body may languish under the most splendid cover. De la Pitié.

Subtlety; artfulness; ingenuity.
Those, with the fineness of their souls,
By reason guide his execution. Shakespeare's Troil. and Cressida.

4. Purity; freedom from dross or base mixtures.
Our works are, indeed, nought else
But the protractive trials of great Jove,
To find perceptive constancy in men;
The fineness of which metal is not found
In fortune's love. Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida.

I am doubtful whether men have sufficiently refined metals; as whether iron, brass, and tin be refined to the height: but when they come to such a fineness as serveth the ordinary use, they try no farther. Bacon's Natural History.

The ancients were careful to coin their money in due weight and fineness, only in times of exigence they have diminished both the weight and fineness. Arbutnot on Coins.

FINERY. n. f. [from fine.] Show; splendour of appearance; gaiety of colours.

Dress up your houses and your images,
And put on all the city's finery,
To consecrate this day a festival. Southern.

Don't chuse your place of study by the finery of the prospects, or the most various scenes of sensible things. Watts.

FINESS. n. f. [from fine.] Artifice; stratagem; an unnecessary word which is creeping into the language.

FIN

FINESS. n. f. [French.] Artifice; stratagem; an unnecessary word which is creeping into the language.

A circumstance not much to be stood upon, in case it were not upon some finess. Hayward.

FINER. n. f. [from fine.] One who purifies metals.
Take away the dross from the silver, and there shall come forth a vessel for the finer. Prov. xxv. 4.

FINGER. n. f. [finger, Saxon, from sangen, to hold.]
1. The flexible member of the hand by which men catch and hold.

The fingers and thumb in each hand consist of fifteen bones, there being three to each finger: they are a little convex and round towards the back of the hand, but hollow and plain towards the palm, except the last, where the nails are. The order of their dispositions is called first, second, and third phalanx: the first is longer than the second, and the second longer than the third. The upper extremity of the first bone on each finger has a little sinus, which receives the round head of the bones of the metacarpus. The upper extremity of the second and third bones of each finger hath two small sinuses, parted by a small protuberance; and the lower extremity of the first and second bones of each finger has two protuberances, divided by a small sinus: the two protuberances are received into the two sinuses of the upper extremity of the second and third bones; and the small sinus receives the little protuberance of the same end of the same bones. The first bone of the thumb is like the bones of the metacarpus, and it is joined to the wrist and second of the thumb, as they are to the wrist and first of the fingers. The second bone of the thumb is like the first bones of the fingers, and it is joined to the first and third, as they are to the bones of the metacarpus and second of the fingers. The fingers are moved sideways only upon their first joint. Besides these there are some small bones, called ossa sesamoides, because they resemble sesamum grains: they are reckoned about twelve in each hand: they are placed at the joint of the fingers, under the tendons of the flexors, to which they serve as pulleys. Quincy.

You seem to understand me,
By each at once her choppy finger laying
Upon her skinny lips. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Diogenes, who is never said,
For aught that ever I could read,
To whine, put finger i' th' eye and sob,
Because h' had ne'er another tub. Hudibras.

The hand is divided into four fingers bending forward, and one opposite to them bending backwards, and of greater strength than any of them singly, which we call the thumb, to join with them severally or united; whereby it is fitted to lay hold of objects of any size or quantity. Ray on the Creat.

A hand of a vast extension, and a prodigious number of fingers playing upon all the organ pipes of the world, and making every one found a particular note. Keil against Burnet.

Poor Peg fewed, spun, and knit for a livelihood, 'till her finger ends were fore. Arbutnot's Hist. of John Bull.

2. A small measure of extension.

Go now, go trust the wind's uncertain breath,
Remov'd four fingers from approaching death;
Or seven at most, when thickest is the board. Dryd. Juv.

One of these bows with a little arrow did pierce through a piece of steel three fingers thick. Wilkins's Math. Mag.

3. The hand; the instrument of work; manufacture; art.

Fool, that forgets her stubborn look
This softness from thy finger took. Waller.

To FINGER. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To touch lightly; to toy with.
Go, get you gone, and let the papers lie;
You would be fingering them to anger me. Shakespeare.

One that is covetous is not so highly pleased with the meer sight and fingering of money, as with the thoughts of his being considered as a wealthy man. Grew's Cefmol. Sac.

2. To touch unseasonably or thievishly.
His ambition would needs be fingering the scepter, and holding him into his father's throne. South's Sermons.
3. To touch an instrument of music.

She hath broke the lute;
I did but tell her she mistook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering. Shakespeare.

4. To perform any work exquisitely with the fingers.
Not any skill'd in loops of fingering fine,
With this so curious net-work might compare. Spenser.

FINGLEANGLE. n. f. [from fangle.] A trifle: a burlesque word.

We agree in nothing but to wrangle,
About the slightest *fingle*angle. Hudibras, p. iii. cau. 3.

FINCAL. adj. [from fine.] Nice; foppish; pretending to superfluous elegance.

A whorl, glazifying, superserviceable, finical rogue. Shakespeare's King Lear.

I cannot hear a finical sop romancing, how the king took him aside at such a time; what the queen said to him at another. L'Estrange, Fable 34.

FINCALLY. adv. [from finical.] Foppishly.

FIN

FINCALNESS. n. f. [from finical.] Superfluous nicety; foppery.

To FINISH. v. a. [finir, French; finis, Latin.]

As he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same grace. 2 Cor. viii. 6.

A poet uses episodes; but episodes, taken separately, finish nothing. Notes on the Odyssey.

2. To perfect; to polish to the excellency intended.
Though here you all perfection should not find,
Yet is it all th' Eternal Will design'd;
It is a finish'd work, and perfect in his kind. Blackmore.

I would make what bears your name as finish'd as my last work ought to be; that is, more finish'd than the rest. Pope.

3. To end; to put an end to.

FINISHER. n. f. [from finish.]

1. Performer; accomplisher.
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister. Shakespeare.
2. One that puts an end; ender.

This was the plain condition of those times; the whole world against Athanasius, and Athanasius against it: half an hundred of years spent in doubtful trials which of the two, in the end, would prevail; the side which had all, or else that part which had no friend but God and death, the one a defender of his innocence, the other a finisher of all his troubles. Hooker, b. v. f. 42.

3. One that completes or perfects.

The author and finisher of our faith. Hebrews.
O prophet of glad tidings! finisher
Of utmost hope! Milton's Paradise Lost, b. xii.

FINITE. adj. [finitus, Latin.] Limited; bounded; terminated.

Servius conceives no more thereby than a finite number for indefinite. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. iv. c. 12.

Finite of any magnitude holds not any proportion to infinite. Locke.

That supposed infinite duration will, by the very supposition, be limited at two extremes, though never so remote asunder, and consequently must needs be finite. Bentley's Sermon.

FINITELESS. adj. [from finite.] Without bounds; unlimited.
It is ridiculous unto reason, and finiteless as their desires. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

FINITELY. adv. [from finite.] Within certain limits; to a certain degree.

They are creatures still, and that sets them at an infinite distance from God; whereas all their excellencies can make them but finutely distant from us. Stillingfleet.

FINITENESS. n. f. [from finite.] Limitation; confinement within certain boundaries.

I ought now to unbury the current of my passion, and love without other boundary than what is set by the finiteness of my natural powers. Norris.

FINITUDE. n. f. [from finite.] Limitation; confinement within certain boundaries.

Finite, applied to natural or created things, imports the proportions of the several degrees of affections, or properties of these things to one another; infinitude, the unboundedness of these degrees of affections, or properties. Cleyn.

FINLESS. adj. [from fin.] Without fins.

He angers me
With telling of the moldwarp and the ant,
And of a dragon and a finless fish. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

FINLIKE. adj. [fin and like.] Formed in imitation of fins.
In shipping such as this, the Irish kern
And untought Indian, on the stream did glide;
Ere sharp-keel'd boats to stem the flood did learn,
Or finlike oars did spread from either side. Dryd. Ann. Mir.

FINNED. adj. [from fin.] Having broad edges spread out on either side.
They plow up the turf with a broad finned plough. Mortin.

FINNY. adj. [from fin.] Furnished with fins; formed for the element of water.

High o'er the main in wat'ry pomp he rides,
His azure car and finny couriers guides;
Proteus his name. Dryden's Virg. Georg. b. iv.

New herds of beasts he sends the plains to share;
New colonies of birds to people air;
And to their oozy beds the finny fish repair. Dryd. Ovid.

While black with storms the ruffled ocean rolls,
And from the fisher's art defends her finny tholes. Blackmore.

With hairy springs we the birds betray;
Slight lines of hair surprize the finny prey. Pope.

FINTOED. adj. [fin and toe.] Palmipedous; having a membrane between the toes.
Such creatures as are whole footed, or *fin*toed, viz. some birds and quadrupeds, are naturally directed to go into the water and swim there. Ray on the Creation.

FINTOCHIO.
